

ACSI Statement on School Choice

ACSI unequivocally supports freedom of choice in education—freedom for parents to choose schooling for their children that is grounded in objective truth and orthodox Christian belief that teaches the intrinsic worth and dignity of every person, regardless of their background. (Genesis 1:27)

The United States Supreme Court has made clear, more than once, that states cannot create programs of general applicability and then exclude religious families and providers. Parents want school choice; nearly two-thirds of the country has implemented school choice programs.
